By F. FOSTER, AUTHOR OF "PRIZE ESSAY ON PENmanship:" "Double Entry Elucidated," and other popular works, gives lessons in writing and bookkeeping, at No. 29 Walker street, where gentlemen are qualified to discharged the duties of a bookkeeper, with facility and despatch.

The manner in which accounts are taught is tedious and unsatisfactory. The pupil is disputed, because the systems adopted are so perplexed with difficulties that all attempts at deductions from the premises are futile, and so much aborlost. Now Mr. Fusier teaches bookkeeping—not by drilling the learner into a calculating machine, but by enabling him to reason and comprehend what he is about to do. The rules are plain and uncerting, and any person of common capacity may understand his system and be able to unravel accounts, however complicated, and to keep books in a clean and satisfactory manner.

BOOKKEEPING, PENMANSHIP, OR ARITHMETIC-dry DOLBEAR, 609 Broadway, will give a practice course to prepare gentlemen or boys for good situations, the lat of Jan. By this course pupils learn practice, rather than necless text book theories. One 810 seat vacant this day.
